English Press Release

“It’s about making music that you feel. It’s about telling stories without words.”

Such phrases are often bandied around with careless abandon in electronic music, although German producer Weltenwandler isn’t the type to make such a grand statement without having the goods to back it up. Having already released on a number of respected imprints, he marks his return to fledgling Swiss based label Electrophil via “Gegen die Zeit” EP, a sumptuous and diverse affair that incorporates not only his love for the dance floor, but his appreciation of harmony and Bjork-esque vocals too, the latter of which are supplied courtesy of the immensely talented Vicky Bary on “Get Away”.

Another Electrophil favourite, T.S.H. is also on hand to bolster the EP, with his solo outings - especially the title track - offering an intriguing insight into his penchant for trippy, convoluted and intricate house music. The family-like label dynamic also comes to the fore via the particularly astute remixes, with T.S.H putting his spin on Weltenwandler’s already frantic “Selenazoline Rave” and the latter giving the emphatic, energy laced title track the same treatment.

As an added bonus, T.S.H also provides an acid fuelled remix of “Get Away” that brings the original to higher planes still. In all, a fitting snapshot of two producers – and a label – both destined for great things.
